Your family name is written on the handle of the fan.

WHERE ARE THE WITNESSES?

The fan was retrieved from the spot where the incident took place. Thus, it's obvious to be a suspect.

The victim claimed that there was only one person.

He disappeared as fast as lightening. Not shocked.

A figure wrapped in a black coat, followed along, by a red-eyed, golden-fur mountain cat.

ARE YOU SAYING THAT I'M THE ONE THAT ATTACKED?

GOLDEN MOUNTAIN CAT?

This kind of act couldn't have been done by humans.

ISN'T THAT THE SAME AS KASETSUP?

Historical Notes:

{Go-daigo Tennou} November 26, 1288 - September 19, 1339
Tennou, also known as Emperor Go-Daigo, was the 98th emperor of Japan, and reigned from 1318 - 1339. After two aborted attempts to overthrow Kamakura Shogunate, Emperor Go-Daigo was banished to the Ōki Islands as a political prisoner in 1332. After the disappearance of Shogunate, he returned back to Kyoto and restored the Imperial Regime (Kenmu Restoration). But impatient reforms, litigation over land rights, rewards, and the exclusion of the samurai from the political order caused much complaining, and his political order began to fall apart. Ashikaga Takauji took advantage of this political unrest and overthrew this regime. Emperor Go-Daigo died at a hidden court of Yoshino in 1339

* (Kamakura Bakufu)

Bakufu is used originally to describe the household of a shogun, but it came to be generally used to describe the system of government of a feudal military dictatorship, exercised by the shoguns (meaning a military rule), and this is the meaning that has been adopted in English through the term shogunate

The Kamakura Bakufu was a feudal military dictatorship ruled by the shoguns of the Minamoto family from 1185 to 1333 AD. The Kamakura period (system of Bakufu) marks the governance of the Kamakura Shogunate that was officially established in 1192 by the first Kamakura shogun Minamoto no Yoritomo.

The Kamakura period ended in 1333 with the destruction of the shogunate and the short restoration of imperial rule under the Emperor Go-Daigo by Ashikaga Takauji, Nitta Yoshinaka, and Kusunoki Masashige. The Kamakura period is also said to be the beginning of the Japanese Middle Ages which also includes the Muromachi period and the beginning of the Japanese Feudal Period which lasted until the Meiji Restoration.

* (Hojo Clan)

The Hojo clan in the history of Japan is a family of regents of the Kamakura Shogunate. The family had an actual power of governing than Kamakura shoguns, who were merely legal symbols. Hojo Tokunasa helped Minamoto no Yoritomo, a son-in-law and after the death of Yoritomo, became a regent, gaining a real power in the Shogunate

* (Onmyoji)

A practitioner and/or master of "Onmyodo", a craft which uses the principle of duality, Yin and Yang principle to interpret between natural and unnatural phenomena and astrological occurrences to foresee the fortunes of humans

One of the primary duties of the Onmyoji involved using his occult powers to serve and protect the Tennou (Emperor), the royal families, and the kingdom from malevolent spirits and demons. Other terms comparable to Onmyoji are: exorcist, supernatural protector, Yin and Yang master, soothsayer, mage, mystic, shaman, wizard, sorcerer, magician, and even necromancer.

* (Shikigami)

More commonly known as "Shikigami", also known as "Shiki no Kami".

Shikigami are invoked as familiar spirits within the cult of Onmyoudou. Shikigami are seen much as a witch's familiar, almost an extension of the people themselves. The most common Shikigami is that given a physical form by folding a piece of paper and, sometimes, cutting it. The onmyoji then enchants that paper and it takes the appearance of someone who appears, for all intents and purposes, real to almost anyone unable to see through the enchantment.

Another type of shikigami is one that is created without necessarily a physical component and is an outside entity not created by the onmyoji.
